

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to adamantly convey the importance of Christian Radio in my life, my family's life and the life of other's who choose to listen to it.

I was at a critical point in my life almost exactly four years ago, and Christian radio, specifically KLOVE, quite literally saved my life. Information was given over the air that had I not heard it, I would have died. Plus, the music is healthy, uplifting and positive in it's nature and has made such a positive difference in my life.

Additionally, Christian radio has been a wonderful alternative for my teenage daughter. She listens to KLOVE almost exclusively and it has had such a positive influence on her that affects her attitude towards herself, her family and also towards her community. Christian radio has inspired her to sponsor several underprivileged children in Africa for nearly 3 years now. She works during the summer to raise the money needed in order to financially sponsor these children. As a mother of a teenager, I could not be more grateful for this positive influence.

By the FCC's proposal to require a community advisory board, require additional staffing and force translator stations off the air, the FCC would essentially be putting up road blocks that would keep Christian radio from being able to exist. And as KLOVE is listener sponsored with monthly or annual financial pledges, listeners should have a voice in programming and content-not an advisory board who may or may not have any interest in a particular station's mission.

I respectfully request that you leave radio as a free market enterprise, in which people will determine the success or failure of a station based on it's content, not Federally mandated programming.

Sincerely,

Dianna Betz
